

EXPLORER LANDOR HERE WITH TIPS FOR ROOSEVELT

African Traveller Has Just Finished 8,500 Trips Across Continent.

CAMERA HIS WEAPON.

Photographed Awakening Lions and Snapshot Giant Savages Attacking Him.

A. Henry Savage Landor, the explorer, who has travelled over more of the earth's surface than most other men, who was the first white man to penetrate into the inner fastnesses of mountainous and mysterious Tibet, and who has recently returned from the longest journey of his career—8,500 miles across Africa—is in this city on his way to Washington, where he will give a few points on exploration to President Roosevelt in preparation for the latter's impending trip to the Dark Continent.

Mr. Landor arrived yesterday on the Baltic and, as he expressed it, was "jolly well pleased" to get ashore, as he was two days late on account of the Republic wreck. He has been captured and tortured by religious fanatics in Asia, attacked by cannibals in Africa, frozen nearly to death in Kamachka, tumbled out of his recently invented aeroplane, and suffered all sorts of unique misfortunes, but this was his first experience with a shipwreck, and he frankly says he prefers the dangers that one meets on dry land.

Here to Advise Roosevelt.

Ten days hence he will lecture before the International Geographical Society in Washington, but that is an incidental detail of his visit; the main purpose is to tell President Roosevelt what to eat and what to wear in Africa; how to avoid the terrible fevers that lay low the unwary traveler; how to dodge the poisonous insects and vipers, and how to chase a raging bull elephant and shoot him in the neck. The President has been a warm friend of Mr. Landor for ten years, and the explorer has been a frequent guest at the White House.

Mr. Landor is under the average height; he weighs 130 pounds, and has kept at that weight since he was a youth. He is thirty-nine years old, and notwithstanding his close-cut iron gray hair, looks little over thirty. As he made his first long journey to Morocco when he was sixteen, he has been exploring for twenty-three years. He is a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of London, belongs to the greatest scientific bodies in the world and is the author of numerous works on travel.

Amateur Exploration Dangerous.

"I do not, as a rule, advise amateur exploration," Mr. Landor said, "for it is a dangerous business to those who are inexperienced, and the majority of cases end tragically. But the case of our interesting President is quite different. While I have not talked with him, I understand he is going more to hunt than to explore, and, anyway, I do not anticipate much danger to him from this trip."

"He is, I believe, going down the Nile to Mombassa and will then proceed westward. He is going into a wonderful country for the hunter. Mr. Selous, the lion hunter, who is going with him, will be of invaluable service, and he is also fortunate in the companionship of Mr. McMillan, whom he will visit. I hear, at Nyroba in Mombassa, Mr. McMillan is a wealthy American who lives in London and in Africa, and is both a mighty hunter and an explorer of considerable experience."

"Will you advise the President regarding his outfit and arms?" he was asked. "It is understood he has purchased all kinds of kits and outfits from London dealers."

"Outfits—kits—costumes? Rubbish!"

GOOD COFFEE EXCITES COMMENT

A Special Blend of Coffee Wins Praise for a Hotel, and Patrons Command It to Others.

Many guests of the Hotel Astor have gone away speaking in the highest terms of the coffee served there. Their claim that it possesses a delicate richness and delicious fragrance that far surpasses any coffee they have ever before tasted.

The original recipe has been secured and this celebrated coffee is now on the market under the name of "Hotel Astor" Coffee, with a guarantee that it is identical the same in every respect as the coffee served now and always at the Hotel Astor, New York.

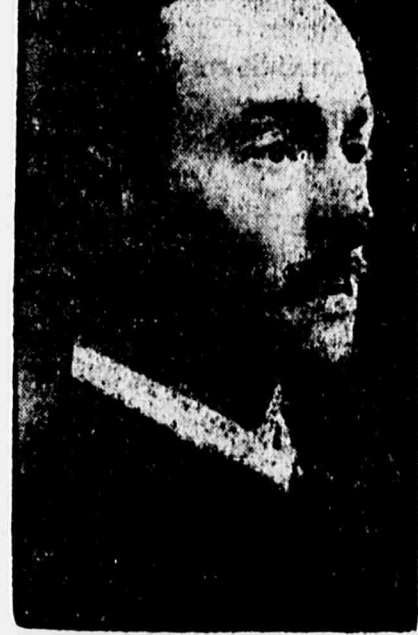

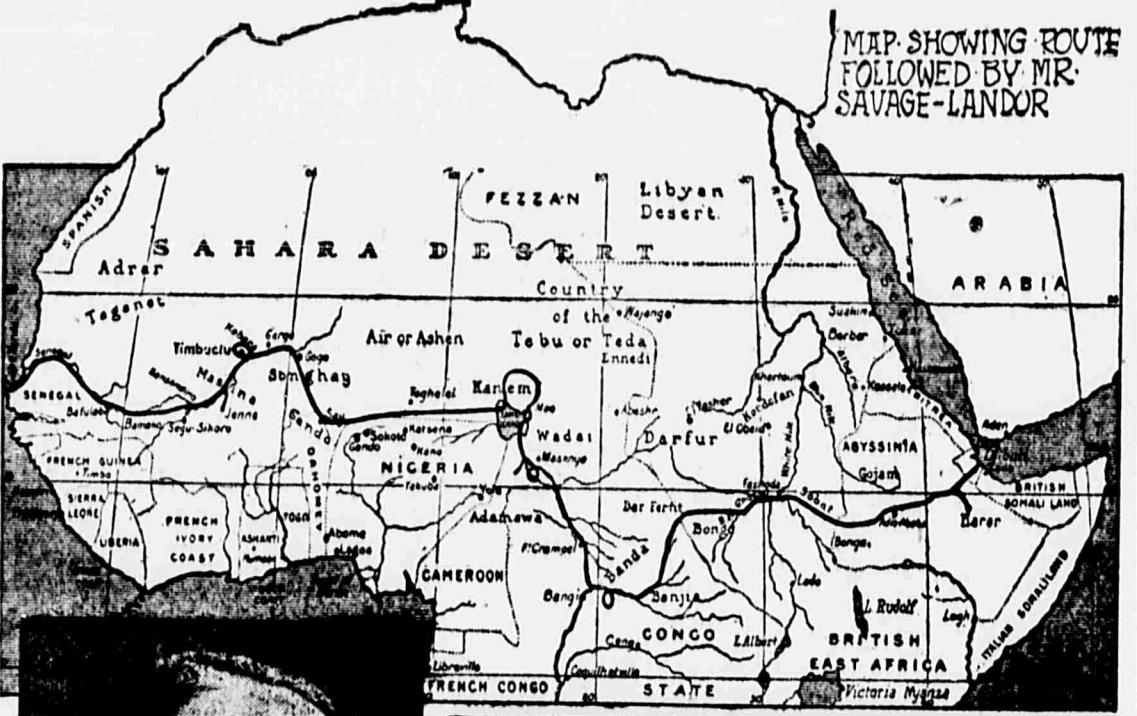

Thus the coffee that was first blended for the exclusive use of this hotel and which excited so much appreciative comment is now packed for family use in air-tight tins and comes as crisp and fresh as the day it left the roaster.

The celebrated Hotel Astor recipe for perfect brewing is packed in every tin, and it will be noticed that, owing to the superior strength of this coffee, much less per cup is required than of ordinary coffees, which makes a pound go much further.

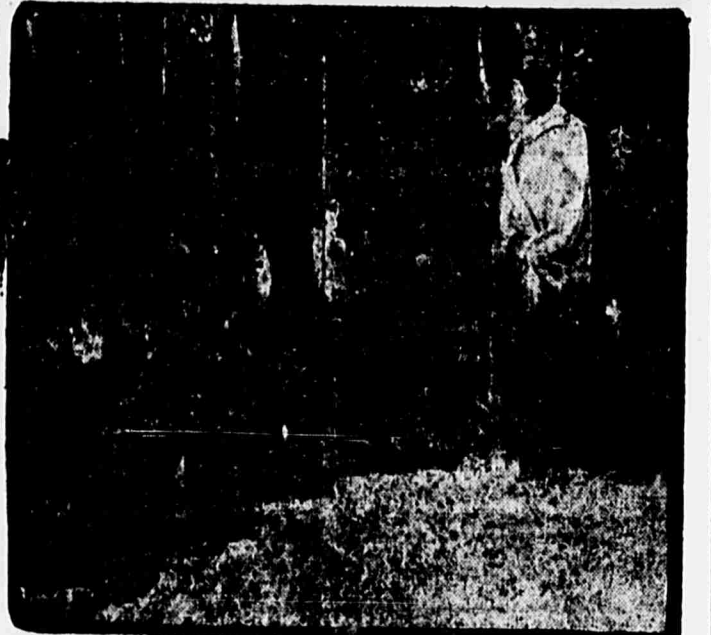

The absolute perfection of taste is realized whether you buy it in bean, ground or pulverized.

"Hotel Astor Coffee" is sold by all good grocers. Get a tin today and learn what real coffee tastes like.

A HENRY SAVAGE-LANDOR

YUMBO GIANTS FROM "ACROSS WEST AFRICA"

said Mr. Landor with scornful emphasis. "I have no patience with the souvenir post-card explorer, all girt with khaki, straps and puttees and helmeted within an inch of his life. A man of good health and strong constitution needs none of these. I went all over Africa and Asia in a light, every-day business suit and a straw hat, and I never wear underclothes or an overcoat.

"Mr. Roosevelt doesn't need any more togs than he wears on a horseback ride, and as for arms and ammunition, I am sure I can tell him nothing on that score that he doesn't already know.

Plenty of Good Hunting.

"Can a man make much of an exploring or hunting trip in the time that

Mr. Roosevelt has allotted to this journey—from April to October? Exploring—no, but he can get the best hunting in the world. Uganda is a paradise for the man who is after elephants, lion, rhino, hippo and antelope. I fancy Mr. Roosevelt will go after elephant and rhino, as they are the games of all quarry. Elephant hunting is remunerative. I brought back several thousands of pounds worth of ivory. The rhino is the fiercest of all hunters' things of Africa. He fights unrelentingly and is afraid of nothing.

"Lions will not attack one. Here is a photograph of two that I crept up on while they were asleep. I was about ten feet away and they were awakened by the click of my camera. When they saw me they got up slowly, blinked once or twice and looked into the jungle. I am sure Mr. Roosevelt will be more interested at his first meeting with a rhino than with any of the other animals."

Mr. Landor has a picture of his camp being attacked by the Yumbos, a tribe of people living west of the Abyssinian plateau. They had only seen one or two white men and they resented Mr. Landor's visit. They rushed his camp one day and the spears were flying thickly when the explorer popped out of his tent with no other weapon than his camera and got a fine snapshot.

Explored Further Than Stanley. Mr. Landor's last African trip took him 384 days. He started from Djibouti Jan. 6, 1906, and, crossing the continent at its widest part, reached the east coast at Cape Verde a year later, less one day. He is the only man who ever accomplished such a feat. It is three times as long as Stanley's trip. He was the only white man in his party, and while he started with about forty native guides, all but two of them left him before he was half way across.

Hunting with him, he says, is incidental as his business is that of exploring. His next longest trip was across Russia to Calcutta—6,000 miles—by horseback and canoe.

Eleven years ago, in Tibet, Mr. Landor discovered the two sources of the Brahmaputra River, and one of the sources was named for him. His reports at the time were subject to much controversy.

"A lot of silly geographers in London criticized me," he said, "as if I would say the Brahmaputra began in a glacier, instead of a lake, when it didn't. Rude! I was gratified not long ago when the Danish explorer, Sven Hedin, returned from Tibet and made a report similar to mine."

Mr. Landor regards the French explorers and geographical societies the greatest in the world and has no hesitancy in criticizing the Royal Geographical Society in London.

"The Royal Society has come to such a pass that now it is a great achievement for one of its members to take

PUT OUT FIRE WITH SALT.

Ex-Fireman Took Care of Blaze in Hotel Before Engines Came.

To extinguish a fire which started in the kitchen of the Sherman Square Hotel, Seventy-first street and Amsterdam avenue, at 7:30 o'clock this morning, a retired fireman, John Gilmartin, now a watchman in the hotel, used a few bags of table salt, and when the fireman arrived on their engines there was nothing for them to do.

One of the assistant cooks accidentally overturned a can of grease on the stove, it ignited, and so did the assistants and the chief cook, and then they fled. John Felix, telephone operator, notified the guests that there was a fire in the kitchen, but no danger. The guests in the dining-room continued their breakfasts. Gilmartin took charge of the kitchen and smothered the fire.

UNCONSCIOUS FROM GAS.

Samuel Payne, thirty-four, janitor at No. 344 Broadway, was taken to Washington Heights Hospital to-day suffering from accidental gas poisoning. He was found by Marcus Ginnard, an elevator boy. Gas had escaped through a defective tube.

WED IN SECRET TO FORESTALL POSTPONEMENT

When Joseph W. Welsh, a young lawyer, of New York, told his fiancée, Dorothy Lehman Kelly, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Philip F. Kelly, of No. 135 Locust street, Philadelphia, that his physician had ordered him to Jamaica for his health, she said she wanted to go with him, and feared her parents would try to have the fashionable wedding planned for next Thursday postponed.

So the couple last Thursday slipped away to St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, in Tenth street, Philadelphia, and were secretly married. They did this to be on the safe side, intending to go through a second ceremony in accordance with the formal announcements at St. Mark's Church next Thursday, provided the bride's mother did not ask for an indefinite postponement, which they were sure she would.

When Mr. Welsh went to the City Hall there to get a license for the second wedding, however, he found that such a license could not be issued, so the young people had to tell their secret. Invitations have been recalled, and the marriage announcements sent out instead. Mrs. Kelly is prostrated. She has been an invalid for some time, and did not want her daughter to live in New York. Mr. Kelly is a wealthy banker, well known in New York.

Over 3,000,000 Free Milk Coupons Will Appear in These Papers Next Sunday

These coupons will appear next Sunday in the following papers: New York World, Herald, American, Sun, Times, Tribune, Press. Also in the New York Revue, Morgen Journal, Staats-Zeitung, Brooklyn Eagle, Newark Sunday Call, New Haven Register and Union, Rochester Democrat and Chronicle and Syracuse Herald. Those who clip the coupon out of the paper can get a 10c. can of Van Camp's Germless Milk (exact size as below) absolutely free at the grocery. One can for each and every family. This is the milk that hundreds of thousands are using today. Learn what it means to use this milk for your cooking. See what it saves on your cereals and in your coffee. You'll never again use milkman's milk after using Van Camp's.

This Is Not "Condensed Milk"

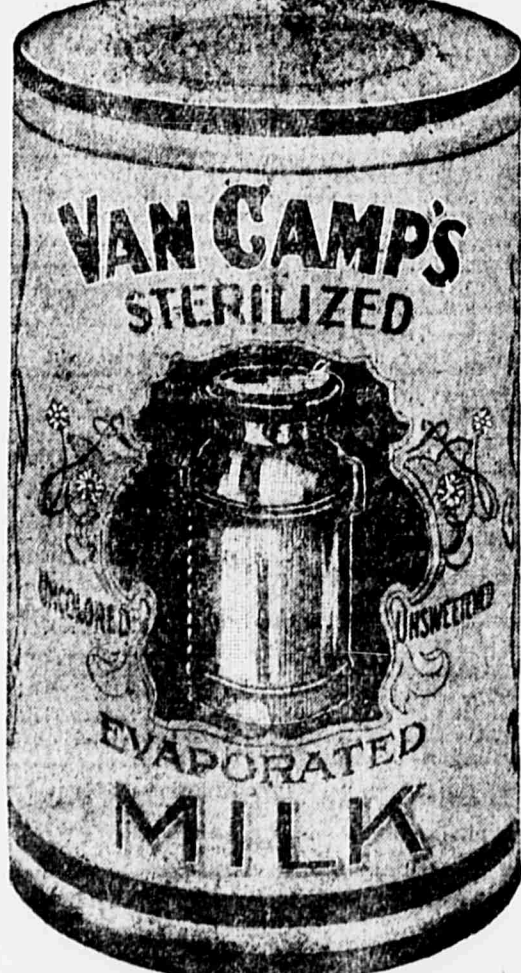

Be Careful "Condensed milk" is half sugar. You can't use it for cooking. Don't think that Van Camp's is like that. And don't think that all "evaporated" milks are alike. Milk less rich, and with more water left in, may still be called "evaporated." Yet others cost as much as Van Camp's. Get the coupon on Sunday and hand it or send it to your grocer.

No Disease Germs

Disease germs in milk breed with frightful rapidity. There may be germs of consumption from tubercular cows, which are common. Infections may come from diseased milkmen or from dirty dairies. Van Camp's milk is germless. Our cows are inspected; so are the men who milk them. Our dairies are sanitary. Our buildings are built without wood. We make a business of cleanliness. Then Van Camp's is sterilized after the cans are sealed. Not a germ of any kind can remain in Van Camp's.

Nothing But Milk

Van Camp's is simply rich Holstein milk, with two-thirds the water evaporated.

This is the Exact Size of the Can You Are to Get.

To All Grocers

Please note that over 3,000,000 coupons will be printed. Each coupon is good for a family to get a 10c. can of milk. We will pay you grocers 10c in cash for each coupon redeemed—the full price of the can of milk—so you will get your full profit. These coupons will be clipped from the papers in enormous numbers, and there will be a tremendous rush to redeem them at your stores, so don't be caught without stock.

Each coupon redeemed means not only a sale now, but means hundreds of repeat orders—a trade you will never lose if you get it at the start. Be ready to meet this opportunity.
